

Four new Cross-Country and All-Mountain tyre ranges from MICHELIN in 2017

This year will see Michelin introduce four new mountain bike tyre ranges tailored to cover an exceptionally broad spectrum of Cross-Country and All-Mountain usages.

Because the demands made on tyres vary depending on their specific end-use, Michelin has produced a new collection of high-tech, performance tyres that deliver excellent grip and strength to cover an exceptionally wide variety of terrain. The four new ranges are:

- MICHELIN JET XCR
- MICHELIN FORCE XC
- MICHELIN FORCE AM
- MICHELIN WILD AM

Tailored to address the needs of XC and All-Mountain riders, who account for 80 percent of the mountain bike market, they will come in a choice of three versions – XC (Cross-Country), XCR (Cross-Country Race) and AM (All-Mountain) – and provide unbridled enjoyment thanks to their combination of innovation and high performance.

In the course of their development, Michelin worked closely with its partners from the world of competition, including the most experienced teams and riders from each discipline. This co-development approach proved especially valuable due to the fact that these ranges introduce two new technologies, namely Gum X and Shield Technology. Another specific, key, performance-enhancing feature is the formulation of their respective compounds with different ones used in the front and rear tyres.

Starting in May 2017, sales will begin with the 'Competition' ranges, followed by the 'Performance' ranges during 2018.
